

Pirate's Wench

There's a wel- come in our tav- ern, for all who sail the seas. But pir- ates are the gent- le men we pre- fer to please. We

There's a welcome in our tavern
 For all who sail the seas
 But pirates are the gentlemen
 We prefer to please
 We serve them rum and brandy
 Then up go the maroons
 Then we'll shiver their timbers
 And they'll double our doubloons
(Chorus)

*It's a grand life being a pirate's wench,
 That's the life for me
 They're easy with their money
 For the woman on their knee*

We all love Captain Morgan,
 A fine dressed buccaneer
 He is the finest catch
 For all the wenches here
 He brings us lace and velvet,
 Then up go the maroons
 Then he climbs into the crow's nest
 And doubles our doubloons
(Chorus)

My favourite is John Silver,
 A pirate of renown
 He pillages and plunders
 The ships that serve the crown
 He brings me gold and rubies
 Then up go the maroons
 Then hoists his jolly roger
 And doubles my doubloons
(Chorus)

I'm not a lady of decision
 When I have to choose Between one or the other
 So neither man will lose
 So they double up their plunder
 And up go the maroons
 As one sails in and one sails out
 I'll double my doubloons
(Chorus)

Avast says Johnny Silver,
 Come along with me
 And keep this pirate company
 Upon the seven seas
 So then we spliced the main brace,
 And up went the maroons
 Now we share a life of piracy,
 Doubling our doubloons
(Chorus)

Do we need to say that we don't approve of real pirates? They're really not nice people at all. But they do look sort of romantic from a distance. Three miles is good. Thirty is better. From three hundred years away they actually look quite good.
