NEPTUNE'S DAUGHTER

Original "Official" Words. Varies from some sung renditions.

Words and music by Bob Watson

There's a voice that I've just heard calling, I've heard many times before.
And it's calling Neptune's daughter back to the sea once more
Back to the sea once more, back to the sea once more,
It's calling Neptune's daughter back to the sea once more.

It's borne on the winds and breezes, and sung on the sea birds' cry,
And when Neptune calls his daughter, then no daughter can deny
No daughter can deny; no daughter can deny,
When old Neptune calls his daughter, then no daughter can deny

Ever since I was a young girl, before that I was full-grown
I'd have traded dolls and dresses, for a boat to call my own.
For a boat to call my own; for a boat to call my own
I'd have traded dolls and dresses, for a boat to call my own

Now I have my own boat waiting, to sail when the tide's inclined,
And it's Neptune's Daughter who must go, and you must stay behind;
You must stay behind; you must stay behind.
It's Neptune's Daughter who must go, and you must stay behind

Think me more of a friend than sweetheart, then it's less of a price you'll pay
If you yearn for Neptune's Daughter, you'll just pine your heart away;
You'll just pine your heart away, you'll just pine your heart away
If you yearn for Neptune's Daughter, you'll just pine your heart away

For it's well that you should remember, it's well that you should decide
I was always Neptune's Daughter, long before I was your bride
Long before I was your bride, long before I was your bride
I was always Neptune's Daughter, before I was your bride

Sometimes when the twilight's falling, in tune with the night winds play,
Will you think of Neptune's Daughter, on the ocean far away?
On the ocean far away, on the ocean far away.
Will you think of Neptune's Daughter, on the ocean far away?

Repeat 1st Verse if desired
